Norman F. Anderson is Chairman & CEO of CG/LA Infrastructure, a firm focused on global infrastructure project development, driving productivity across countries. He oversees Blueprint 2025, a group of leading public and private entities focused on doubling the size of infrastructure investment in the U.S., and including the group's steering committee, the National Infrastructure Performance Council. The Performance Council is anchored by founding chairmen, Hank Greenberg (founder of AIG) and David Petraeus.

Mr. Anderson was instrumental in creating the Trump Administration's initial infrastructure policy, focused on 50 strategic projects to drive the country's growth forward, earning the title of the U.S. Infrastructure Czar, in both print and television media. This informal role - in constant contact with Cabinet-level officials - continues to drive the Administration's thought on infrastructure, particularly in terms of the identification, selection and support for priority infrastructure projects.

Mr. Anderson is, or has been, a member of various World Economic Forum groups, including the Global Advisory Council on Infrastructure, the Strategic Infrastructure Initiative, and the Advisory Committee on Building Foundations for Transparency. He initiated and co-authored the WEF's study on Accelerating Infrastructure Delivery (May 2014). For the US Senate Foreign Relations Committee he authored a White Paper on economic statecraft, focused on infrastructure markets worldwide (June 2014). He has taught at Columbia University in New York City, teaching a course on Engineering & Entrepreneurship. He is a partner in CAMG, a pan-Atlantic infrastructure fund.

He is a regular contributor to CNBC, Bloomberg, CBC and Fox Business News, discussing the US and global infrastructure markets. Mr. Anderson began his career as a Peace Corps volunteer in Paraguay, serving for a total of five years. He is married to the former Ingrid Sckell, and has two children - Norman Gabriel (32), an attorney at Latham & Watkins; and Janina Victoria (30), a visual artist and professor at Concordia University in Montreal. He speaks four languages, including Portuguese. He has a graduate degree from Harvard University.
